rowed it fine; then took a two-horse plow and ridged it up something like the stake down into the ridge; the holes were made about 18 inches apart followed and dropped seed in each hole; then we took a mixture of slacked lime and leached ashes, equal parts, and put a handful in each hill, covered lightly with earth. They soon started to grow, and as the plants began to appear above ground we covered them with straw about one foot deep. That was all the work they got, except going through them every morning for two weeks and killing the bugs. The weeds never got through the straw during the summer. We began using them the 15th of June, used all we wanted (a family of six persons) until the first of November. 50 bushels of as large an i dry potatoes as could be desired. They were of the Early Rose variety. The ground was cultivation for ten years. Was it the lime and ashes, or the manner of planting, or the variety of potato used, that gave such results? There was not less than at the rate of 300 bushels per acre.

Value of Sea-weed Manure.

It has long been customary on the seacoast to use sea-weed (Fucus, Laminaria, etc.,) for a manure, its value for this purpose being considered by many as scarcely inferior to stable manure. This applies, however, to sea-weeds oper, the eel-grass (zostera marina) being of a very different character, and, on account of its slow decomposition and different chemical combination, of much less value. An especial feature of the true sea-weeds consists in their large percentage of nitrogenous matter and in the great amount of ash, one analysis giving for dry sea-weeds nearly 7 per cent. of nitrogenous matter, 75 of cellulose, and about 18 of ash. The amount of nitrogen proper may be estimated at from 11 to 2 per cent.

The principal objection to the use of sea-weed as a manure consists in its very small percentage of phospheric acid. This, however, can be easily remedied by the addition of some phosphate, such as bone-meal. In the large amount of gypsum it contains, sea-weed serves admirably as a dressing for grazing What important business is it that prelands. It is also very well suited to potatoes and other roots, tobocco, flax, and growths requiring a good deal of potash. As an element in compost it is quite unrivaled, owing to the readiness with which it is decomposed and the intimate combination which it enters into with other substances.

Diseased Potatoes.

The extensive failure of the potato crop in Great Britain, in consequence of the prevalence of rust and rot, is a subject of grave moment, as bearing upon the welfare of the laboring classes, and a method of utilizing the diseased potatoes has been made public at the instance of the British Government. This depends upon the fact that the starch of the potato is not affected by the disease, but retains its nutritive properties. The process consists in rasping the peeled tubers, upon a bread grater, into a tub of water. The starch cakes, or mixed with flour, as bread.

A Safe Test for Coal Oil.

A correspondent writes: The most effective way to stop the sale of dangerous oils and burning fluids which are so destructive to life and property is to educate the people. The test is so simple that it is in the power of every one. It has often been published, yet there are thousands of people who have not heard it. You will benefit the people by repeating it often.

The test is as follows: Pour a small quantity of the oil out upon a saucer or tin plate; apply a lighted match; if it ignites immediately, or even before the fire touches it, let the oil be returned to the vender as unsafe. Good, safe oil will not flash, but burn slowly when the lighted match is drop-ped into it, and the fire is extinguished as soon as the match is removed. If the people will subject their oil to this accidents will be rare.

Anecdote of Baron Rothschild,

A short time ago the Baron Van Rothschild took a walk in Paris, and suddenly found himself behind the Pantheon, in a part of the city with which he was not familiar. He entered the shop of a dealer in old curiosities, and discovered among a great deal of worthless trumpery an old barometer from the time of Louis XVI., the carving of which was exceedingly well preserved. The Baron, who is a connoiseur of such things, immediately resolved to buy the barometer. The price was ten francs, and Rothschild, glad to get it

"Well, never mind," said he, "I will take the barometer, anyhow. Send it nishing an excellent article of food. A at my house."

The baron was greatly puzzled. He had never dreamed that anybody could be ignorant of his name; but as he happened to be in a very good humor, he felt highly amused, and was just about to give her some information as to who he was, when he saw a commissionaire pass by on the other side of the street. He beckoned to him, and when the honest Auvergant stood before him, he asked him:

"Do you know, perhaps, Baron Rothschild ?" "That is a funny question, sir.

Preparation of Meat Extract.

A new mode of preparing certain kinds of meat has lately been patented in Paris by M. Durand. This has more particular reference to the flesh of prawns, shrimps, and other delicate crustaceans, in regard to which, as is well known, much trouble is experienced in the picking out of the flesh from the external skeleton after boiling. The new method consists in placing the shrimps, while still alive, in a double metallic ring perforated with small holes, some course material being used as a filter. This ring is subjected so cheap, put his hand in his pocket to to pressure, which squeezes the flesh give the woman who kept the store a ten franc piece. Unfortunately he discovered that he had left his pocketbook seasoning, boiled, and dried by evaporation, so as to form a compact paste, which will keep for a long time, fursimilar process can be applied to the can be forced out, leaving the bones, scales, etc., behind. The flesh of both fish and crustaceans before cooking is perhaps be applied to advantage in the case of shad and herrings, the bones of which constitute so great an objection to them as an article of food.

Veterinary Surgeons all over the country are recommending Sheridan's Cavalry Con-dition Powders for the following trouble in horses: -Loss of appetite, roughness of the hair, stoppage of bowels or water, thick water. soughs and colds, swelling of the glands, worms iorse all, thick wind, and heaves. - Com.

A friend of ours who is chief clerk in he Governmental Dispensary, says that no medicine chest is now complete without John mencine enest is now complete without John-son's Anodyne Liniment. We always supposed it was prescribed by law; if it is not, it ought to be, for certainly there is nothing in the whole materia medica of so much importance to the soldier and the sailor as Johnson's Anodyne Liniment. - Com.

"A Wonder of Medical Science, may well be applied to Dr. Wistar's Balsam of Wild Cherry. It is, therefore, of the utmost importance to men engaged in active pursuits, who are subject to attacks of bodily weakness and mental stupor or indifference, to know from what source they can obtain immediate and permanent relief. The tonic and anti-bilious stimulating elements combined in Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, peculiarly adapt that genial preparation to cases of this kind. The rapidity with lar and nervous system, is marvelous. Acting first upon the digestive organs, and through them upon the fluids of the body, the nerves and the brain, it renovates, refreshes and regulates, not only the corporal powers, but the mind itself. As debility and its usual concomitant, mental torpor or de pression, are often caused, and where they already exist, are always aggravated by the damp and variable weather prevalent in the spring months, persons of feeble stamina and weak nerves, should go through a course of this agreeable stimulant at this season, and indeed would derive great advantage from taking it at least once a day throughout
